Mr. Rockefeller Moves
Brokers Want More Work
Einstein Right, As Usual
Best Swedish Novel

By ARTHUR GRISBANE

A few years ago nothing was respectable except a house of one's own, separate from all others. The late Albert Einstein, returning from Europe in the last century, suggested the building of apartment houses with central heating for families. He was told, with indignation, that Americans would never sink to that level. They have sunk.

In these days of many automobiles and much gas from exchangers, every one has moved well up above the ground level. It is not a house of one's own, separate from all others, that is the ideal. It is a house of one's own, separate from all others, that is the ideal.

New York's Stock Exchange wants a work day one hour longer, from 10 until 4, instead of closing at 3 p. m. Many shares of stock might be sold in that extra hour.

"Prosperous" farmers' asking for an extra working hour when the majority of workers ask for fewer hours, need not surprise. The stock market is a game of chance, and the farmer is a gambler.

If a man owns even a foot-black stand he never takes another "hour" day. Money that comes in his.

That fact keeps farmers on their farms, in spite of hard times and agitation.

Professor Einstein says truly that nothing in the Debye-Hückel theory justifies the idea that men must compete destructively to live up to the survival of the fittest doctrine.

The real truth is in Kropotkin's "Mutual Aid" in "Evolution," which shows that "man" has helped each other as the ultimate survival.

In many places water does not come from the ground, but from the sky. Women fought each other, dirt, and helped each other.

On the Atlantic Islands, half way between Sweden and Finland, there lived a family named Rindman, consisting of father, mother, and twelve children. Sally, one of the sisters, came to America, found employment as a housemaid, worked at night for a year on a hotel where she called "Kathleen." She has received the prize of 20,000 marks, for writing the best novel in the Swedish language, and is going back to see her eleven brothers and sisters and her mother, the father is dead.

This reminds you that many intelligent, young women and men are working at domestic service, and a few men, intelligent and worthwhile than those that hire them.

Mr. Trippe, Pacific American Airways, carrying passengers across the Pacific ocean, California to Manila, offers a new air fleet, each with a wing spread of 150 feet, cruising at 200 miles an hour, twice as fast as the present " Clippers." They are genuine biplanes, but with wings that will weigh 82,000 pounds.

Great will come of this airplane flight, Chicago to London in time for lunch, San Francisco to Tokyo in time for dinner.

Belgium proposes to admit a full-fledged minister to Canada, in addition to the present Belgian consul. Perhaps the Belgian government realizes that Canada is the most important of the British Empire, means on both sides, the Arctic on the north, the United States on the south, no near future, disintegrated possibilities. The day may come, and probably will, when Canada will be the rock of the British Empire, with London for its European headquarters.

Roosevelt Returns To New York From SURPRISE CONFERENCE Western Tour

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt returned to New York City today after a surprise conference with Col. Frank Knox, his running mate, after starting political leaders by announcing a cross-country dash to California to speak in Los Angeles October 20.

Knox, who filed a speaking date in Tulsa, Okla., last night, will arrive here this afternoon.

The two Republican nominees will discuss plans for closing the campaign. Landon already has addressed the nation in a radio speech in St. Louis the Saturday before. A similar tour will be arranged for Knox.

A flood of 100 telegrams poured in on Landon from Republican leaders in California today, when he was virtually a sure winner in the state.

Some of the telegrams came from California, urging the governor to stop for a "real party" talk from his "Southern friends" on his first day in the capital on the return trip.

Two new stops on the Western tour were announced. One will be at Albuquerque, N. M., in the last week of the month, and the other at Phoenix, Ariz., on the return trip.

The regular Republican expenditures are juggled up and the regular Democratic expenditures are juggled down. And the New Deal regular expenditures for the first full year of 1936 are a billion dollars more than the Republican expenditures.

To present hypothetical, mischievous figures to the American public life. It is an American.

He referred to the speech by President Roosevelt relating to the Pittsburgh speech. He delivered in Pittsburgh four years ago and the other was in Pittsburgh.

It was Pittsburgh speech of four years ago, Mr. Roosevelt said. He said that the speech was the most reckless and extravagant piece he ever heard of in the history of the world.

ONE MORE DOES, VOTE PROPE

Charges that threats and bribes have been employed to alienate witnesses for the Republican State Committee probing illegal election practices, were made today by Theodore H. Hollis, attorney for the committee.

Hollis further charged that the only place the names of these witnesses could have been obtained was at the office of the Boston Election Commission.

"I have been informed that witnesses who signed statements, now in my possession, denying the existence of these alleged threats or bribes have been approached and offered inducements to change their testimony before the Election Commission."

At the time the Republican State Committee made public the list of signatures, the several witnesses who signed the list have this information and the only other source of information is on file in the office of the Boston Election Commission.

The committee, which is headed by Hollis, is investigating the charges, believed illegal that it found on Thursday, contained information which gives the name and address of some of the witnesses.

"With the name and address of the witnesses themselves, the committee would be able to determine whether they had been subjected to threats or bribes."

What amounts of money were proffered for silence, or what type of threats were made to the witnesses, Hollis would not say.

To date Hollis has not named any illegal in Ward 21, with the exception of the names of the witnesses, which he has not named.

Attorney Hollis revealed that the witnesses themselves were the complainants in the case. He said that they had been subjected to threats or bribes.

What Landon Stands For: Legal Methods

GOVERNOR LANDON believes a government THAT DOES NOT LIVE UP TO ITS OWN LAWS has confessed its inability to function effectively UNDER ANY KIND OF LAW.

The Roosevelt Administration HAS MADE THIS CONFESSTION MANY TIMES.

The New Deal has been in CONFLICT with established American law ever since its inception.

In the first flush of its emergency power, IT TRIED TO MAKE ITS OWN LAWS.

When the courts refused to sanction this FLAGRANT USURPATION of authority, the New Dealers protested against such restraint.

THEY COMRAINED that their hands were being tied, their program was being impeded, their purposes frustrated.

In short, the New Deal ADMITTED it could not function WITHIN THE LIMITS OF CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

GOVERNOR LANDON thinks America NEEDS a government CAPABLE of directing public affairs WITHIN THE LAW.

He believes the structure of constitutional law under which the United States has progressed so far is the BEST EVER DESIGNED for the guidance of any nation.

GOVERNOR LANDON stands for HONEST GOVERNMENT, that will earn the respect of the people BY RESPECTING THEIR RIGHTS.

In his creed, departure from legal methods is the resource of weak and dishonest leaders WHO ARE NOT BIG ENOUGH FOR THEIR JOBS.

Diving to Death!

Reader's Tale of Terrible Four-Hour Battle Under Water

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Let's dive right into this one with Diver and Distinguished Adventurer Walker Hayes of New York City. And remember that we're not only diving deep down into the treacherous currents of the St. Lawrence River—we're diving head first into the River of Adventure, too! What was Walker Hayes diving for in the St. Lawrence? Sunken treasure? Nothing of the sort. It isn't always the glamorous jobs that furnish the big thrills. Divers do a lot of prosaic work in between those treasure hunts you read about, and Old Lady Adventure has a habit of piling it onto the lads when they're doing a routine job and are least expecting it.

Walker was inspecting bridge foundations for a railroad. In August, 1935, he was looking over the underpinnings of the famous Victoria Bridge which spans the St. Lawrence at Montreal. "I said that Adventure always hits you when you're least expecting it. Maybe I'm wrong in this case, Walker knew he was going to have trouble with the Victoria Bridge—at one spot anyway."

"I was inspecting the piers on the Montreal side," he says, "and at that point runs a treacherous rapid which had taken the lives of two bridge workers only the previous Summer. The noises of the pier lower too far out from beneath the bridge to enable us to reach a protecting screen to stop the current."

"All we had to work with was a small platform, just large enough for two men and the diver, built on the nose of the pier down close to the water. The pump, worked by hand, was up on the bridge and the air line passed down the pier. A short steel ladder was lashed to the platform to enable me to descend."

That's the picture. Now watch it move. Walker looking like some strange sort of robot in his life-filled rubber suit and round headlike steel helmet is really in for a job.

It is a life in the morning as he steps onto the ladder, and little does he realize that at 12 noon—four hours later—he will be down under the river fighting a life-and-death battle with a raging tide. Step by step he goes down, hugging the ladder to keep from being swept downstream.

Now his helmet touches the surface, and we dive down after him to see what happens.

"The current is stronger here at the nose of the pier," says Walker, so I planned to examine that first, then attempt to come on along the side to the shoulder. After looking at the nose, I started upstream, lying flat on my stomach to resist the current. I had moved about six feet, when, suddenly, I was struck with locomotive force.

A cross-current had caught me and was whirling me away from the pier—out toward the middle of the stream! In an instant I was spun around like a falling tree—crushed by tons of roaring water. It all happened so quickly that the tender had no chance to snub the line.

"It was utterly helpless. I couldn't see, for the water was a boiling mass of foam, and I could no more control my movements in that current than if I had been a chip of wood. But helpless men aren't the worst of it."

An ever-present thought in the mind of a diver is the danger of the soil inflating and blowing up like a balloon if the head gets knocked loose from the rest of the body. The minute I began to roll, I jammed my head against the air release valve to deflate the suit.

"I must have done it with too much force, for the small, brass shaft of the valve bent and would not work properly. In the meantime, I was hurried downstream and wedged into a rock fissure, which, for the moment, saved my life."

Tons of water were pounding against Walker, knocking the breath out of him and threatening to crush his body. Then, to his horror, he found that water, trickling in through the broken air shaft, was slowly filling his suit. He began trying to communicate with his tender.

The flow of the water made the phone useless, and when he tried to signal by jerking on his line the current made it almost impossible to feel the jerks. From the all but unintelligible signals that did come through, Walker gathered that his tender intended him to move down with the current and be hauled in at the back of the pier. He fought his way out of the fissure.

In an instant he was pulled up by the nearest tether and spun around like a top. Then the dreaded show-up came. His feet shot up in the air and his head down as the suit inflated like a balloon. His helmet, hanging against the rock, was splashed around inside it. He was motionless for a moment. Water splashed around him, there was the imminent danger that his tender would pass.

"That line," says Walker, "was tied around my chest, and the force of the current bent me backward. The current snatched me, forced against my neck, strangled me. After what seemed hours, a heavy rope was cast down to me. The lifeline was fast as a steel spring, and all they had to do was loop the rope around it and the force of the current carried it down."

But now I realize that I was very weak, and everything depended on getting that rope around me and securely tied. It took me half an hour to get that rope tied in a simple clove hitch, and then I was completely exhausted. I gave a jerk on the rope to signal the tender, prayed for the break, and waited.

"I didn't mind dying so much, but the loneliness was horrible. After an eternity I felt strong jerks on the rope and realized I was about to be pulled in. It was then that I had about as much of an even chance of getting out before the suit burst as I was broken in two by the current."

"But it was a strong, steady pull—much steadier than I thought possible. Then, suddenly I was out of the water—safe again. My men had hauled me from some invisible lifeline in the water working on the bridge, and it was that which had pulled me out with such an even, rapid pull."

It was a miracle in Walker's tender to see him alive. He had been under water, fighting for his life, for FOUR HOURS. A few minutes longer, and he would have been drowned—drowned and sent on to the next world through the side of his helmet.

"My boys' faces were chalk white when I came out," Walker says, "but my own, from strangulation, must have looked worse than any of theirs."

Now how about helping me compose a few ten back bills, such as that valuable piece of paper. And watch the paper for the thrilling story told by Hank Gibbons of North Wilmington.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Fred A. Carlson of 57 Deaconess road, Boston, won one hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of the page.

Captain Andy March, Or the Metamorphosis Of Lafayette's 'Sis'

CAPTAIN ANDY MARCH IS THE ATHLETIC officer who replaced popular Pat Eccles in West Point's official family this fall. We called him "Sis" when he was an undergraduate at Lafayette College in the days before the war, a slender, perky person with a pleasant line of garrulous gab and a secondary interest in sports.

He was a student at Lafayette College in the days before the war, a slender, perky person with a pleasant line of garrulous gab and a secondary interest in sports.

He was a student at Lafayette College in the days before the war, a slender, perky person with a pleasant line of garrulous gab and a secondary interest in sports.

It wasn't that Captain Andy's nickname "Sis" came from any lack of male hardihood on his part, but because his given name was Francis and we had to differentiate between his cousin, Frankie, who was also a Lafayette scholar. "Sis" lived across the campus in a vine-covered cottage with his dad, Professor Francis A. March, one of the Old Testament characters of the college, who insisted that the lad maintain the high intellectual standard of the family. So that "Sis's" upstairs windows were aglow night times long after the rest of the rosters were downtown at Sep's, drinking from tankards big as butter churns and blowing down the chandeliers with their college chants.

NATURE'S LITTLE MIRACLE

THE LAFAYETTE TEAMS OF THAT ERA were recruited from the anthracite regions, where burly types were picked off the slag heaps, or in the Lehigh Valley farm fields, where shaggy youths were called from the plow. No lad was thought the less of for spread of his shoulders or the thickness of his neck.

He was a student at Lafayette College in the days before the war, a slender, perky person with a pleasant line of garrulous gab and a secondary interest in sports.

THE TROGLDYTES SAID "SIR"

FOR SOME YEARS THE PAPERS WERE full of how Cadet Francis March would tear in and snatch a Navy wallback naked with a single sweep of his paw and how he had a knack for smothering punts with a necklace of interfering backs strung from his neck.

He was a student at Lafayette College in the days before the war, a slender, perky person with a pleasant line of garrulous gab and a secondary interest in sports.

$5 TO SPEND BEFORE MIDNIGHT

Captain Andy is glib with figures, too, so that one earns it costs $25,000 to bring the 1800 members of the cadet corps to Boston for the Harvard game, not including the ticket item for those choice center seats, which Harvard writes off under "game expense" to the equivalent of $5,000. It required five Pullman sleeper sections to haul the student soldiers from the Academy sidings on the Palisades to the railroad yards behind Mechanics Building, where they unloaded at 8-20 this morning and marched in a column of fours to mess in Memorial Hall.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1936

Harvard Eleven that takes the field for the starting whistle at the stadium this afternoon. This is Dick Harlow's best possible combination and many have a hunch that they will be tougher than Army anticipates.

Kaydets See Red

And Harvard Hopes Turn Grey as Army Arrives

Harvard Prepared To Shoot Works

1650 strong on five special trains—a $30,000 express shipment of a million dollar outfit—and marched into Cambridge for lunch in advance of the cash customers. Not all of the Harvard-Army game is the game itself; the precision swing of the young ranks is a heartbreaker and the Army cheers, clipped sharp like one-pound gun fire and crashing back like the echo of the same, are the best cheers in all football.

Little fellow—good little fellow—always became legendary in Harvard and Army circles. The future officers are corks but far from overconfident.
